Introduction

The Part-Time Online MBA program from Carnegie Mellon University is ranked the seventh in the world in the International Trade Rankings 2023, tied with City, University of London and Stanford University.

Delivered in a hybrid format that includes weekly online classes and on-site weekends, the Part-Time Online MBA provides great flexibility for working executives to build master's study into their daily routine with minimal travelling and virtually no leave taken. The first half of the program covers the core curriculum on management know-hows and quantitative analytics, while the second half focuses on electives and team-based capstones that elevate hands-on practice.

All MBA students will be supported by Tepper's Masters Career Center in their career planning and job search through a portfolio of industry-specific services, including career coaching, networking activities and on-campus recruitment.

Ranking performance highlights

To earn its position in the International Trade Rankings, the Part-Time Online MBA program delivered strong performance across a number of key areas. Some noteworthy characteristics are:

Program Delivery

Unlike a traditional MBA that requires in-person attendance, candidates will meet twice a week virtually after working hours and attend Access Weekends either remotely or on-campus as they wish. In addition to classes and professional development workshops on managerial capacity, Access Weekends also compliments the MBA journey with extracurricular activities designed to building a close-knit student community and promoting interpersonal skills, such as case competitions and hackathons.

Graduate Outcomes

Ranked highly in this dimension, the program reports that 97% of MBA graduates received a job offer within three months upon graduation. Core to this achievement is the active role of the Masters Career Center in facilitating career support. It organizes more than 100 recruiting events and 2,000 job advertisements each year while maintaining close recruitment connections with more than 300 companies around the world.

Trade Content Program

The MBA curriculum focuses on developing the skills to transform economic data into strategic decisions. Students can hone their industry expertise by choosing their desired tracks from the course catalogue of the business school and across the Carnegie Mellon system. Second- and third- year MBA students will participate in experiential learning capstone projects that require them to utilize data analytics to make informed decisions and collaborate with real-life clients for growth strategy and recommendations.
